

ONE KILLED AND ONE INJURED

One man is dead and another seriously injured as the result of an explosion on the 1100-foot level of the Belmont shaft at 2 o'clock this morning. The dead man was named George Cabrillo and the injured one Dan Zarcovich.

At this writing the facts connected with the disaster are meagre. From what can be learned, however, it appears that the men were loading their holes and that in some manner the explosion occurred. Cabrillo was killed instantly, Zarcovich being rendered unconscious. As soon as he regained consciousness he spread the alarm and assistance was soon on the scene. The body of the dead man was removed to the surface and Zarcovich taken to the Miners' hospital, where Dr. Smith dressed his wounds. It was found that his head was quite badly cut, his face lacerated and his body from his knees up literally perforated with small particles of rock. While quite seriously injured, he is not necessarily fatally hurt. The injured man has been employed at the mine but a short time, while Cabrillo is an experienced miner. He is literally torn to pieces by the force of the explosion. Neither one of the men is married so far as can be learned. From the time of the explosion to the spreading of the alarm an interval of more than one hour elapsed. Shots are fired at 2, while Zarcovich did not emerge from his condition until after 3. At the hospital he was not in a condition to talk, consequently his version of the accident cannot be given our readers this morning, although the facts are practically as stated. Coroner Atkinson was immediately notified and arrived on the scene. An inquest will be held this morning. The dead man was well known in Tonopah, where he has long resided.

DECLARES HE IS FOR ROOSEVELT AND ROOSEVELT POLICIES IN MATTERS OF IRRIGATION.

(By Associated Press.)
SPOKANE, Aug. 11.—With the stage carefully set, the actors prepared with their lines and an overwhelming audience in place, the Ballinger-Pinchot battle royal burst upon the National Irrigation congress this afternoon. The man who, in the language of an enthusiastic Californian, "ripped things wide open," was Dr. George Pardee, former governor of California. He attacked Richard Ballinger, secretary of the interior, with a fierceness only seconded by that of former Senator George Turner of Washington, who came to the defense of Ballinger. These two became the principal actors in a little drama which was enacted after the appearance of the secretary of the interior had paved the way for the battle. President Barstow, after introducing Ballinger, caused to be read a telegram from President Taft, in which the president assured the congress of his support in the reclamation, preservation ideas, and then assured the delegates that the secretary undoubtedly would assure them the same allegiance as coming from himself. The secretary declines, however, to become enthusiastic on this point. He proceeded after a few introductory remarks to read from a paper his idea on reclamation and the public domain. Ballinger spoke on the attitude of the administration toward the reclamation of the arid lands of the west. He said the government had invested over $50,000,000 for irrigation works. "While it is possible," said Ballinger, "that persons of limited means may successfully enter and acquire irrigated lands it will generally be found that it isn't a poor man's proposition unless coupled with intelligent industry in agriculture." The government by the investment of $50,000,000 succeeded in irrigating over a million acres of the arid lands. It may be stated that more than $50,000,000 has been added to the value of these lands. When Pardee took the platform to deliver his address he had no use for his manuscript. He opened by saying he was for Roosevelt and Roosevelt policies. "Roosevelt was the president who did things first," he said, "and talked about them afterwards; that is the kind of a man we would like to see in the public now." Pardee told of the activities of former Secretary Garfield, who under the instruction of Roosevelt withdrew from public entry many tracts of lands under the belief that these lands should be held by the people. "Now," he said, "Ballinger has again put up for entry these lands, each tract of which had in its boundaries a water power site. 'I don't oppose private enterprise in the development of these sites,' said Pardee, 'but I do oppose giving away immense right to private corporations which in a few years will hold the same political control over the cities and states that the railways now hold. 'The thing to do,' he said, 'is to withdraw water power sites as did Roosevelt and hold them for the people. When,' pleaded the speaker, 'for God's sake are we ever going to have a chance for the common hard-working citizen. Ballinger has said irrigation isn't a proposition for the poor man; I take issue with him to say it is particularly a poor man's proposition. If there is anyone trying to make it not so, let us find out about it.' Turner immediately took the platform. 'To say the least,' he said, 'the remarks of Pardee showed bad taste, especially at a time following Secretary Ballinger who did in his official capacity only what any man would do under oath of office. He has obeyed the law. Among the resolutions introduced today was one seeking the protection of birds of plumage.

Children Taken From Street and Men Carried Away in Ambulances.

(By Associated Press.)
SALT LAKE, Aug. 11.—The glare of the midsummer sun, falling with impartial severity upon young and old, thinned the annual parade of the Grand Army of the Republic and wrought still more suffering among the hundreds of children who participated in the formation of a living flag, arranged for the edification of the old soldiers. Incomplete figures show that at least 100 children were taken from the street and from fifteen to twenty old soldiers carried away in ambulances. Many of the victims recovered soon after being placed in the shade. There were no fatalities. The hours of the parade were the hottest of the hottest day since the beginning of the encampment. At 11 o'clock the thermometer registered 85; at noon it touched 87. Ten minutes past 1, when the procession was disbanding the sky was clouded over; a roll of thunder was heard in the mountains and the mercury dropped to 78. This low temperature continued for two hours. Over five thousand and veterans marched in the parade, while fully one hundred thousand spectators saw the spectacle. Arkansas had the distinction of sending the smallest division, there being but four wearers of her badge. Illinois made the largest numerical showing.
